Findorff's 2017 Newsmakers of the Year

MADISON – Since Findorff's start in 1890, our people have set the bar for excellence in the construction industry. We have continued this tradition as several of our employees were recently recognized by The Daily Reporter as Newsmakers of the Year. They include:

- Reese Mersberger: As the Rising Young Professional of the Year, Reese is a Project Engineer who routinely embraces new challenges with his unique experience and skillset. As part of the team that recently completed the impressive Westin Milwaukee Hotel, Reese helped coordinate construction efforts on a tight urban site, managed the project schedule, and assisted with labor management. For nearly ten years, Reese has additionally been engaged with community organizations such as Habitat for Humanity and Revitalize Milwaukee.
- Christin Mlsna: Christin was recognized as the Business Developer of the Year. As she was recently promoted to Director of Education Market & Communication Services, Christin is known for strategically spearheading efforts and transforming business initiatives in Findorff's education sector. In the last 10 years alone, Christin has supported $877 million of successful school referenda throughout Wisconsin. This work has included developing internal processes and procedures that have been replicated in Findorff's other market sectors.
- Carl Wickman: Honored as Estimator of the Year, Carl has nearly 20 years of experience as Findorff's Senior Preconstruction Manager. From K-12 educational facilities to high-rise residential developments, Carl's expertise in preconstruction and estimating is second to none. He continually strives to go above and beyond to help clients save time and money on their construction projects. By working closely with project teams to manage budgets, value engineering, and constructability analysis, Carl exemplifies what it means to leading and strategic estimator.
